This Vessel has only made two Whaling voyages, was originally sheathed, and since her arrival in this port has been completely caulked and sheathed anew, new Masts have also been put into her, and her rigging completely overhauled, of course her Hull and Rigging are in perfect order—and it is presumed from her having been employed in the Whaling business and her timbers completely filled with oil, she will be as durable as any vessel. An inventory of the ship and her materials may be seen at the Coffee-House, or at the house of the Subscriber, South-east corner of Arch-street and Sixth-street.

If the above vessel is not sold at private Sale immediately, she will be exposed to Public Sale on Wednesday evening the 21st instant at seven o'clock, at the City Tavern in Second-street.

The Subscriber has also for sale,

A Cargo of excellent Whale Oil

In casks proper for exportation, being full bound with Iron Hoops, which is an advantage not common in Cargoes of Oil at this market.

ALSO,

THE AMERICAN REPOSITORY,
AND ANNUAL REGISTER,
For 1799.
THE publication of this useful little work has been retarded, this year, beyond its usual time by the late melancholy visitation. It was committed to the press early enough, but by the general dispersion of the people that took place the latter end of August and beginning of September, it was unavoidably interrupted. As soon as it was safe to return to the City, and the Printer could get his hands together, the work was resumed; and it is with pleasure that the Editor has now to inform his friends and the public in general, that it will be compleated and published the first week in December.

Forty Dollars Reward
FOR APPREHENDING
A GENTLEMAN NEGRO,
BY name GEORGE or GEORGE PARKER, the property of the subscriber, who has thought proper on the night of the 21st inst. to elope from his master without any provocation or just cause; he was formerly the property of Beckwith Butler, esq. and lived a considerable time with —— Pottenger, who kept tavern in Frederickburg, having seen much company and travelled with several gentlemen through different parts of this state, he is much known. It is therefore conjectured he will push for some of the northern cities or towns as he has discovered an aversion to plantation work, though he may perhaps have crossed the ridge where he has a brother belonging to major Butler.
This fellow is about five feet seven inches high, well proportioned and walks active and brisk, his countenance is open and agreeable enough when in good humour; he can hardly be surpast in shrewdness, and is a very capible waiting-man, house servant, barber, &c. To describe his dress would be useless, as he possessed a variety of clothes, though when dressed lately, he wore a green coat bound with white ferreting and spotted jacket and breeches. Whoever brings him home or secures in goal in this or any other state the said slave, so that I may get him again, shall have the above reward. ALEXANDER VASS.

OBSERVATIONS
On LAVATER's REMONSTRANCE to the EXECUTIVE DIRECTORY.

THE lamentable cries of Lavater to the great nation, have excited nothing in my mind but ridicule and contempt—nothing of pity—nothing of commiseration—nothing of friendship or good wishes. O Lavater, you have greatly mistaken the physiognomy of the great nation, if you can believe that either the pompous and absurd flattery, the pitiful moan, or the ineffectual threats of a degraded Swiss vassal—degraded by his own consent, by his own agency—can move their inexorable purpose of universal domination and rapine. Dost thou look for redress from their justice? Follow with thine eyes, as far as thine eyes can carry thee, the boundless course of blood and devastation which they have passed over in a few years, in a mite of time, and you may then indeed exclaim, with feelings of horror, and not in the vile humiliation of a slave's flattery, "What other nation, ancient or modern, has performed the actions which it has done?" But you must hope for nothing for poor Zurich from its justice. Do you hope for a restoration of your immolated liberty, and plundered property, from the pity of the great nation. Take the whole range of the last eight years—take all the vast and innumerable scenes, both at home and abroad, in which they have been engaged, and point me a single instance where the cries of humanity have arrested the hand of blood, or the tear of pity has glistened in the eye of a Frenchman. No—they have thrown off the authority of Heaven; they have broken down every obligation of morality; they have extinguished every characteristic of humanity, every tender attachment between man and man;—THEY CONQUER TO PLUNDER AND ENSLAVE; and the conquered and enslaved cry for mercy in vain. Meet the robber at the threshold, and resolutely defend the entrance of your dwelling. If you fly before him, or if, deluded by his perfidious offers of friendship and benefits, you open your arms to welcome him, you are indeed lost. Is it not incredible that in the year 1798 any man should make an appeal to the justice and pity of France. Where have you been Lavater? Are you "ignorant of its deeds," or have you lost the faculty of horror? Do their awful crimes pass in long succession before you without an impression? If thou could'st applaud, while they sacked the world and opened rivers of innocent blood, learn at least to think, to reason, to know them from the fate of Switzerland. But the desolation of a neighbouring canton, of a sister state, was too remote to open thine eyes, to expose the bloody assassin, the insatiate robber. Look then to Zurich, to thine own Zurich, and how canst thou be deceived, or hope for justice or mercy from France. But you would sooth them with thy flattery. Believe me they will laugh you to scorn. The flattery of a conquered, voluntary slave, is dull, vapid, vile and ridiculous. They are the "great nation,—the matchless nation." Alas! poor Zurich has found them matchless indeed in perfidy, cruelty and villainy. You say, "many of the most able and enlightened heads admire the atchievements of this people, considered as philosophers, politicians and heroes." As philosophers, they have filled the world with vice, discord and unexampled misery; as politicians, they have governed by falsehood, perfidy and force, and have laid the certain foundation of ages of discord, bloodshed and wretchedness for their country; as heroes, they have murdered weakness and innocence, the infant and the aged, the mother and her babe. You assert another sentiment, for which I almost despise you—Lavater speaks not then; it is the conquered slave of France,—the wretched dupe of Republican intrigues. —You say that France "may be justly called the great nation, for it has produced the greatest, and I will still hope the most beneficial results ever produced by man, in any period of time!" This sentiment can need no comment, no contradiction—ask Italy—ask Switzerland—ask Zurich, what are the beneficial results of the atchievements of this great nation—Shew me the country on earth, shew me the man on earth, to whom their revolution, their conquests, their principles or their friendship have yet been or are likely to be beneficial—Slavery, ruin and desolation are the certain consequences of all and each of them—While the relentless rapacity of France excludes you from all hope of pity from her, you give us a fact that will make the world deaf to your cries; even should misery accumulate tenfold upon you —When the true heroes of your country, her noble and magnanimous defenders, (patriots of immortal glory receive this weak tribute from a free American!) were struggling against the hosts of France and the dastard degeneracy of corrupted Switzerland, were contending in a deadly exertion against the arm of the murderer and the treason of their brethren; what did Zurich? "supplied the barbarians with cannon and ammunition!" For this deed she is blasted of Heaven and detested by man—Parricide! talk not of atonement. The ghosts of your slaughtered brethren call aloud for vengeance —the groans of your enslaved country shall ever disturb you. Let Zurich be swept from among nations—let her become desolate as a wilderness—let her habitations become lonely rocks, and her waters be turned to blood, and let it be remembered that she aided the destroyers of Berne, and she will find no commiseration from man. Let every American read and seriously reflect on this important fact. Let them learn from it that France divides to destroy; and that those who adhere to her are involved in a common ruin with those that oppose—no promises bind her faith, no services hold her friendship. To serve France, Zurich murdered her brethren: Zurich struck a dagger to her own heart—yet Zurich is enslaved, plundered and destroyed. France promises that no French troops should enter Zurich, that not a sou should be demanded of her. "But the very reverse happened" —three millions of livres are exacted, and troops are marched in without the least previous application to exhaust the country. Americans! be not deceived, be not divived by the black perfidy of French promises. Let us stand firmly together, man to man, brother to brother. If we then fall it will be with glory, and we shall not, like Zurich, be sunk in infamy and humiliation, we shall not like her be followed with the curses and contempt of the human race.

AN AMERICAN.

November 20.

The following proclamations stand under the Dublin head of the 19th Sept. Each is decoratad by an Irish Harp, surmounted by a Cap of Liberty, and bears this motto, Erin go bragh. The Irish editor says, "We insert them for the amusement of our readers."

LIBERTY or DEATH!
Northern Army of Avengers.
"Head-quarters, the First Year of Irish Liberty.
"United Irishmen,
"The soldiers of the Great Nation have landed on your coast, well supplied with arms and ammunition of all kinds, with artillery worked by men, who have spread terror amongst the ranks of the best troops in Europe, headed by French officers; they come to break your fetters and restore you to the blessings of Liberty.
"James Napper Tandy is at their head. He has sworn to lead them on to victory or to die. Brave Irishmen, the friends of liberty have left their native soil to assist you in re-conquering your rights. They will brave all dangers and glory at the sublime idea of cementing your happiness with their blood.
"French blood shall not flow in vain: To arms—Free-men to arms: the trumpet calls—let not your friends be butchered unassisted; if they are doomed to fall in this glorious struggle, let their death be useful to our cause, and their bodies serve as footsteps to the temple of Irish Liberty.
General Rey.
"In the name of the French Officers and Soldiers now on the coast of Ireland."

General J. N. Tandy, to his Countrymen.
"United Irishmen,
"What do I hear! the British Government have dared to speak of concessions! Would you accept of them?
"Can you think of entering into a treaty with a British Minister? A Minister too, who has left you to the mercy of English soldiery, who has laid your cities waste, and massacred inhumanly your best citizens.... A Minister, the bane of society, & the scourge of mankind... behold, Irishmen.... he holds in his hand the olive of peace; be aware his other hand lies concealed armed with a poinard. No, Irishmen, no.... you shall not be the dupes of his base intrigues. Unable to subdue your courage he attempts to subdue you, lest his efforts be vain.
"Horrid crimes have been perpetrated in your country.. Your friends have fallen a sacrifice to their devotion for your cause. Their shadows hover round you and call aloud for vengeance.
"It is your duty to avenge their death. It is your duty to strike on their blood-cemented thrones the murderers of your friends
"Listen to no proposals, Irishmen: wage a war of extermination against oppressors—the war of liberty shall triumph?
"J. N. TANDY."

Such is the authentic detail of a circumstance which was yesterday magnified into a new invasion by 25,000 men, landed at Killebegs, and established in full possession of the county Donegal.

Blackwell, who accompanied Tandy in his expedition, is a person who some time ago was compelled to fly the county of Clare for seditious practices.

When Napper and his friends found that the good people of Rutland were not formed of revolutionary stuff, and thought it prudent to re-embark, they left with the post-master of the town a certificate of which the following is a copy

"Rutland Island, 30th Fructidor.
"Having landed from on board the Anacreon, a republican vessel from the coast of France, on Rutland Island, and being in want, for the time, of accommodations, we were under the necessity of putting the Citoyen———, postmaster of that town or island, under requisition, and preventing him from sending off his packets; and at the same time discharged every obligation, and paid for whatever we took from the said place.

TANDY. Gen. of Brigade and commander of the expedition.

PRIVATE LETTERS.

"Dublin, Sept. 29.

"The account of the defeat of the Rebels at Killala is confirmed.

"At an early period I told you that Mr. Reynolds was to be rewarded for his information, and evidential services, against the Executive of the Irish Union, with the appointment of Governor of the Bahama Islands; and I have now received further assurance of this fact from very respectable authority. I have also to inform you, that Mr. R. has not only renounced, as you already know, his political errors; he has also adjusted those of religion, and last Sunday se'nnight read his recantation of the doctrines of Popery, at the Asylum Chapel in Leeson-street.

"When rogues fall out, honest men come by their own. If this maxim applies as well among politicians as among thieves, some benefit may result to the public, from a falling out that has taken place between the proprietors of the Dublin Journal and their late Dictator! The cause was this, a certain corps were presented some days back with a stand colours by a lady, who accompanied them with an address suited to the occasion! This was given to the Dublin Journal for insertion, and, strange to tell, refused a place in those columns which have, under the present directors of that print, ever been devoted to the purposes of political irritation and division. But incredible as it may seem, such was the fact. The Editor, who is Secretary to a kind of Committee of Orange Masters, or, if I may so term it, to the Orange Directory of the Irish disunion, endeavours to excuse himself by saying that he has been obliged to act in this case conformably to orders received from a certain high official quarter, and which went to prohibit the insertion of any thing of the Orange cast—but all in vain. The great man is not to be appeased; and his high spirit can ill brook to have his "way prescribed in Venice." This, following the defeat of the Wide-street job, looks well for Ireland.

"The plunder and depredation expected to arise out of the present disordered state of this island, is every day more daringly manifested. Last night a banditti of a dozen or twenty men broke into Alderman Truelock's country-house, within about a mile of the city, and on the Rock road the most populous avenue, and robbed it of cash, &c. to a considerable amount. The security of persons and property, I am sorry to say, promises to be very precarious throughout the ensuing winter.

"I have nothing further to add, than that Tone has not been executed this day, but is expected to be hanged to morrow."

TONE's DEFENCE.

September 24.

This day Mr. Tone proceeded in his defence. He called as a witness his father, Peter Tone: the questions which he wished to ask him were written on a slip of paper, and presented to the Judge Advocate, who examined the witness from it.

Q. Do you knoow the prisoner? and have you had any, and what intercourse with him. —A. I am his father; I reared him, and have had that intercourse with him which generally subsists between father and son.

Q. How old is the prisoner?—A. About twenty seven years old.

Q. Did the prisoner at any time leave his country to go to any other, and at what time.—A. He left this country about six years since, in order to go to America.

Q. Why did he leave Ireland?—A. failure in his circumstances made him leave it.

Q. Did you know the habits in which the prisoner lived, previous to his going abroad? A. I did; and knew him to have been sober, and attentive to his business, until business went wrong with him.

Q. What was his business?—A. He was engaged in the cotton manufactory.

Q. Was he a man that at all interested himself in politics?—A. Not to my knowledge; I knew him rather to attend to his business.

Q. Did you know him at any time to belong to any political soriety?—A. Never; nor do I believe he ever knew any thing about them. Had he belonged to any such society, from my intercourse with him, I must have known it.

Mr. Tone called no other witness. He proceeded to read his defence, which was nearly as follows:

"Mr. President, and my lords and gentlemen of the court martial—Fully relying upon the validity of the objections to the competency of this court to try me in the present case, and expecting, from the honor and humanity of the court, that they will not only allow to these objections their full weight, but that they will also take into their consideration whatever favorable circumstances may be connected with my unfortunate situation: I proceed not so much to urge a defence, as to give you a plain and candid account of the whole course of my conduct. Before I do so, however, I must observe to the court, that when I objected on Monday last to their competency, I did not mean to say that they were a court unknown to the law; I acknowledge that it is a constitutional court, and recognized by the common law of the land; but I did mean to insist that it is authorised to act only in certain cases, and at certain times, and that it is incompetent to act, unless at those times, and in those cases. I have already admitted that I am an Irishman. Unsuccessful in my endeavors to obtain an establishment in my native country, I was obliged, at an early time of life to quit Ireland, and go to America. This necessity arose from circumstances which I was unable to foresee or to remedy; it arose simply from my failure in business, and was totally unconnected with any political considerations. You have heard from the witness against me, that, previous to my going to America, I was in France. It is true that I did go to France; but at that time the war between France and these countries had not commenced; and as you have heard from the witness, I was arrested in France as a spy, and confined for nine months. Had I been a polical agitator, did I entertain designs against my country, or was I accredited by any discontented party, it is impossible to suppose that I should have been thus treated, at a time when it is well known France was but too eager to excite and to receive persons of that description. From France I at length escaped and arrived in America; from whence, after I had resided there for some time. I was induced to visit Hamburgh, where I had a sister. At Hamburgh I remained until I became weary of being a burden to those whom I would rather have wished to assist. I quitted it; and will it be imputed to me as a crime, that with poverty staring me in the face, and a competence soliciting my acceptance, I accepted that competence, and did take a commission in the French service? I became a soldier; and, in obedience to my orders, embarked at la Rochelle with the army which landed in Ireland. But though I embarked with that army, I most solemnly declare I was not only not consulted, but not even apprised of its object. I was too obscure to be asked for my advice, though my knowledge of both languages induced them to secure my co operation. When in Ireland, I appeal even to the witness against me whether I acted officiously in the service, or whether I did more than it was necessary I should do to avoid disgrace and death? I appeal to him, whether I assisted in depredation, planned an attack, or appeared in any way cordially and actively to promote the object of the expedition? Though I acted from necessity as an officer, it appears from the evidence that I was decidedly adverse to the Rebels; as soon as possible I made my escape from them, assumed the appearance of a peasant, while I was in search of a Magistrate to whom I might surrender. When taken, I confessed my name and my situation, and used no artifice to conceal the truth—a circumstance which alone may tend to procure me relief, when I say that I had fled from the Rebels, because I would not join in their cause, and was seeking an opportunity of giving myself up to a Magistrate. You have now the whole of my unfortunate story: born to no inheritance, reduced in my circumstances, and destitute of support, I left my country and entered into the service of France. This is my only crime, I am no fomentor of sedition; I am no conspirator against the state. As a soldier, I was ordered upon service, and I obeyed; and in that service confined myself strictly to the inevitable duty of the station which I filled. If this shall not amount to a legal defence, I hope it will at least wipe obloquy from my name, and soften the harshness of private judgment, if it shall fail to mitigate the severity of a legal sentence."

Mr. Tone, having given in this defence, begged it might be transmitted with the other proceedings of the trial. In presenting to the Judge Advocate, he said, his wish was to prove to the court that he was no way connected, nor ever was, with the Society of United Irishmen; and that he fled from the Rebels to avoid engaging in their wicked proceedings.—The court was then cleared of strangers.

September 25.

"Holt, it appears by the latest accounts, is moving with a large body up towards Wexford. The daring of this marander is beyond example. He on Sunday last sent a letter into the town of Arklow, to inform the inhabitants he would speedily be among them; and that he would not spare a single Orangeman in the town.

"A party of the king's county militia were yesterday overtaken at the Black-rock, on their route from Wicklow, where they have been a long time quartered, by two of Holt's emissaries, who sat drinking with them till four this morning, and endeavoring to induce them to break their oath of allegiance, by joining their brother soldiers in Holt's camp. Mr. Justice Bective, who resides there, having received timely information on the subject, had them both apprehended, and they were this morning brought up to town under a military escort, and lodged in Kilmainham gaol

"Government it is said, have this day received information from Cork of the appearance of a French fleet off the coast."

September 26.

"The post-boy who drives the Wicklow mail, arrived in town at six this morning, with his cart empty, having met on his way a body of about 50 Rebels near Newry-bridge: says, they were all well armed, most of them having muskets, which he describes as quite bright, and appearing as if they belonged to the army. Most of the men wore uniforms. On their stopping him, they bid him prepare for death: he then threw himself on his knees, and continued praying for half an hour, whilst they were securing the letters, &c. which, some of them observed, would be a great acquisition to Mr. Holt, in conveying him intelligence of the designs of the enemy. After they had plundered the cart, one of them proposed burning it, which the rest did not seem willing to consent to. They then permitted the boy to proceed to town, without doing him any injury.

"This day gen. Lake, accompanied by Colonel Meade arrived in town from Wicklow,

"Military operations have at length commenced against the rebels in the province of Connaught. An engagement had taken place with the Rebels at Grange, near Sligo, wherein, it is said, near one hundred and fifty of these deluded men were cut off. On Sunday last, two regiments of militia, a party of the Frazer fencibles, the Castlebar and the Tyrawly yeomanry, marched from Castlebar to attack the rebels, who have yet possession of Killala, Westport, Newport, &c. and are in very great numbers through the mountainous part of that country. The latter corps acted as guides on the occasion. A report was prevalent this evening, that this army had defeated the rebels, and recovered possession of those towns. They had 16 miles of the country to march before they entertained hopes of coming up with them.

"Nine o'clock.—I have just now learnt that the rebels at Killala have suffered a total defeat from gen. Trench, who commands in place of gen. Hutchinson; several thousands are reported to have been put to the sword; no quarter was given, except to some of their leaders, who are reserved for a public examination. Killala, Ballini, &c. &c. have been taken possession of by the King's troops. Several Frenchmen were taken, and the Bishop of Killala happily rescued from the hands of the rebels; his life, it is said, was spared by the interference of a French officer. Such is the report this evening, which is generally spoken of, and generally spoken of, and generally credited in all circles"

WATERFORD, September 28.

Last night several expresses arrived here from the county of Kilkenny, and many were dispatched from hence to the neighbouring positions of the army. The South Devon and two pieces of artillery marched this morning for Knoctopher, in the county of Kilkenny, within fourteen miles of this: General Johnston himself took the command of the troops. These some days past bodies of insurgents have been disarming the people in the above country; but last night a body of them, well mounted and armed, entered the village of Knoctopher, and disarmed the yeomanry (not in a collective body) tore their uniforms, and refreshed themselves with drink, &c. when they separated. On the departure of the South Devon, the drums beat to arms, and the yeoman attended and took the guard of the city. The greatest excesses continue to be committed in the county of Wexford: the loyal inhabitants are flying to the towns, and say that they would consider their lives, &c. much safer, were the country in a state of open rebellion in place of the predatory warfare which at present exists.

Remarkable affection in a Dog.

At the late battle of Ballynahinch, one of the unfortunate insurgents who fell in the engagement was followed by his dog. The faithful animal for three days lay across his master's bosom, until buried; and then for many weeks constantly attended his grave, only at intervals when hunger forced him into town—When his remarkable sagacity being observed, a person took him, and by care and attention he seems to forget his unhappy master.

[The above article is from a villainous jacobin print, called the Star, the mere echo of the Morning Chronicle. It is a striking specimen of the vile arts practised by the partisans of France to excite to insurrection, by appealing to their compassion, in behalf of those "unfortunate" villains, who are dialy perpetrating the most horrid murders.]

FEDERALISM of MAINE.

Hon. GEO. THATCHER, the Man of the people!

Such is the Federalism of Maine, that notwithstanding the secret attempts, the base deceptions, and the low-cunning of the vile Jacobins, we are warranted in asserting that the Hon. Go'. THATCHER is re-elected Federal Representative by a very handsome majority. The votes stood as follows, in the towns as marked beneath.

Kittery, 40 for G. Thatcher } both federalist
30 for Jos. Tucker, }
Berwick, 77 for Thatcher.
3 for Fairfield the jacobin.
York, 56 for Thatcher.
20 for Fairfield.
Wells, Unanimous for Thatcher.
Labanon, ditto 00
Biddeford, do do.
Pepperalborough, do do.

The settled, determined Federalism of the People, certainly bids defiance to all Frenchmen and French hirelings. With an ADAMS and a WASHINGTON at our head, What have we (under Providence) to fear!

RUTLAND, November 12.

Legislature of Vermont.

A concurrent resolution has passed the Legislature of this state, the 23d Oct. requiring the Senators and Representatives in this state to use their best endeavors, that Congress propose to the Legislatures of the several states, the following amendment to the constitution of the United States, viz—"No person shall be eligible as President or Vice President of the United States, nor shall any person be a Senator or Representative in the Congress of the United States except a natural born citizen, or unless he shall have been a resident in the United States, at the time of the declaration of independence and shall have continued to reside within the same, or be employed in its service from that period to the time of his election."

The yeas and nays being taken, there were 152 yeas, and 5 nays.

WESTFIELD, November 9.

To the Printers of the Impartial Herald

Last Monday we met according to appointment for the purpose of choosing a Representative for the next Congress, and with great satisfaction we inform the public that our noble and patriotic Shepard, who in the hour of danger, has always stepped forward in defence of our Government & happy Constitution, had all the votes except two---so you see that Federalism reigns triumphant here.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 21.

 The Eastern Mail arrived at a very late hour, but brings nothing new.

THE man who doubts the organization of a party in this country, to overthrow its constitution and government, and to new model both with the assistance of France, must be a creature of the doubtful gender, to say the best of him:—but he that sees the danger clearly, and is not ready to oppose it with all his force, possesses less animation of patriotism than is consistent with the character of a good citizen. If we reflect on the general fame of the French Despots for activity, ambition and perfidy; if we call into review their conduct towards the government and people of this country, as well as towards all others; and especially, if we recollect their impudent threats of humbling us to their will, by the means of internal traitors, we must think it necessary to watch this vile class with vigilance, and to oppose every suspicious attempt of theirs with decision and vigor. I am far from thinking that the dangers, which threaten this infant empire, are confined to the present day, although they now appear more obvious: No! the same restless ambition the same want of good faith, that have always been the characteristic features of the French cabinet, will continue to disturb our repose, and to exacerbate parties among us, so long as there is a rivalry between her and Great Britain;—or until there is an insuperable barrier opposed to her profligate schemes.

But to combat this hydra the ordinary powers of government are hardly sufficient, without some extraordinary aid from the sound, and virtuous part of the community. There are many things that ought to be done, for which there is no law provided, or funds existing, which are necessary to secure the general safety against so dangerous a foe. Few men are so profligate as to plot against their country, without some motive of public or private advantage; and there are very few indeed, who can promise themselves any real profit or gratification from a convulsion or revolution in the State. But if this number, however small, are men of talents, and become the obedient engines of the enemy, they are sufficient to delude, inflame, and mislead a host of unsuspecting ignorant men. The first, therefore, ought to be closely watched; their secret caballings detected and exposed; and the last to be undeceived, and, if it is possible, to be reclaimed.

This will be laying the axe to the root of the tree. Against an united people the French will never attempt any thing. Their government is a "Committee of Universal Insurrection"; it is by treason they work; and the man who will not unite with his own government and its friends, to oppose so dangerous an enemy, is a traitor, and ought to be immediately crushed; for if there ever was any truth in the axiom, that "he that is not for us, is against us," it exists at this day. It is safer to cut off a gangrened member, than to endanger the life of the body, by its continuance.

UNITE OR DIE, was the motto of the revolution war. We remember its powerful effect at that period, and it will certainly be good policy to bring it into operation at the present crisis, when we have ten thousand times more at stake. We were then contending against a parent and brethren, from whom we had reason to expect moderate terms, if their superior strength had prevailed against us. The abject subjugation of the colonies was never contemplated, nor would it have been tolerated, even in England. But we have now to war against a cruel and rapacious enemy, opposed to us by every principle that is inimical and repulsive; barbarians that contemplate not only the total annihilation of civil liberty, but the prostration of our sacred altars, the renunciation of our religion and our God. Unite or die is therefore at present, more than it ever was before, a maxim and a duty of indispensable obligation.

The friends of government should not only know their own strength, which I believe is great; but they should also know their enemies and their strength. They should act with regularity, union and decision; determined to support one another, and the common cause of their country and government against all possible risques. But this will never be done without more union, and a better organization. Look at the Jacobins; fas est ab hoste doceri; take a lesson from them. Every where, however wisely dispersed, their strength is concentrated; they act with the unity of instinct, as well as the industry of demons; and it is by these means, they have been able to retard and cripple every measure of national defence; although they are fewer in number, and incomparably weaker in power, that they are still able to feel the hopes, as well as to point the blows of our barbarous enemy.

Let, therefore, ASSOCIATIONS be formed in every considerable City and Town of the United States (the example may be set in Philadelphia, so justly distinguished for its patriotic exertions) let committees be appointed; funds raised; presses employed; let information be disseminated at cheap rates every where; let the ignorant be instructed; the wavering confirmed; the banditti watched, in their uprising and downsiyings; and I will offer my neck to the guillotine, if, in twelve months, after the scheme is brought into operation, they are not completely crushed.

The money and notes, taken by requisition from the Bank of Pennsylvania, amounted to the enormous sum of 164,000 dollars; the whole of which has been recovered, to within 2,000. This was almost a Gallic hug. The Porter, Cunningham, who was also a Democrat, was a man in whom, it seems, the greatest confidence had been placed—of which he availed himself to effect his villainous purposes. Finding he had got the Fever (with which he was seized the day after the robbery) Davis went to him, and thinking it unsafe to have so great a quantity of money, in so mysterious a situation, proposed to take it all home with him, which was done: Davis, having thus gotten the whole into his possession, bethought him how he might dispose of it; and began to make large deposits in the different Banks. Coming, one day, to the Bank of Pennsylvania, with a considerable sum, and being known to some persons in the bank, as a man whose visible means were insignificant, strong suspicions naturally arose, and an enquiry was immediately made at the other banks, where it appeared he had made deposits to the amount of 17,000 dollars. Means were instantly taken to examine him, and after much ado, he confessed—refusing, however, to acknowledge a large quantity of gold, which was in the end discovered upon him, untouched. He had purchased a carriage and pair of horses which he delivered up. Cunningham died four days after the robbery.

The horrid strides with which the Democrats of America daily advance in depravity, through the influence on their minds of those detestable principles of France, which inculcate that all property is common, that to hold wealth is aristocratical, and that there are no future rewards or punishments, must, if not suddenly and severely checked, root up all the foundations of society——We regret, therefore that the villain has escaped the hands of justice. It is hoped that these terrible instances, added to hundreds which have heretofore occured, of the danger of trusting men of democratic principles, will operate in future as a caution to all public bodies as well as individuals.

A commencement for conferring degrees was held in St. John's College, in the City of Annapolis, on the 9th inst. when the degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on messrs. James Donaldson Lowrey, John Rumsey, John Leeds Kerr, John Taylor Lomax, William Potts, William Campbell, John Hanson Thomas, Alexander Hammett, John Claude and William Donaldson."

On Friday last, an elegant Bridge, consisting of one large arch, which had just been constructed over the river Lehigh, at Easton, at the expense of several thousand dollars, unfortunately fell in. The ingenious builder, was Mr. Horn, of that place.

The United Staees Frigate Constitution, capt. Nicholson (says a Boston paper) has arrived in the outer harbour, having sprung her bowsprit and foremast in the late heavy gale of wind.

We are well assured that Nathaniel Potter, one of the porters of the Bank of Pennsylvania, who died of the late fever, was not concerned in the robbery of the Bank. He was ill of the fever at the time of the robbery, and is well known to have performed his duty to the Bank with the utmost fidelity and to have acted throughout the whole course of his life with uprightness and integrity.

Those Printers who have published an account of the discovery of the robbery are requested to publish the above.

MR. FENNO,

ALTHOUGH I have heard much said about the beginning of the Nineteenth Century, I never supposed a reasonable doubt subsisted in the mind of any person when that period would arrive, and I acknowledge myself much surprised to hear a gentleman of education, abilities and candor, advocate an opinion different from mine. From this circumstance I am led to propose the following questions and answer them agreeably to my own ideas of the matter.

How many years make a century? Suppose one hundred—can the second century commence before the first is compleated? we suppose not—The question then is when was the first century or hundred years compleated? But not having been much acquainted with centuries, and finding a mathematical proportion between them and months, I substituted the word month in the place of century, when a similar position at once occurred to my mind. Moses my son a fine boy was born a little before one o'clock in the morning of the first day of the present month of November. He is my first child. I wish to know when he will enter his second month. Æ.

N. B. As it is a matter of much anxiety to the parent he wishes an answer.

Nov. 17, 1798.

"MR. FENNO,

"In your paper of yesterday, I observe you have copied from a Gazette called the Aurora, an advertisement for a private meeting of the United Irishmen of Philadelphia, on the 23d instant, with what is called their Rising Parole and Countersign, printed thus, in capitals.

CODROMAGHT SAOIRSEAUGHT.

The mystical meaning of which may be found by any anagrammatist, to be applicable to any close meeting in the dark, in any large city, where their rising might commence by night.

The Parole is

Room ahoa!

Countersign,

This dagger cuts.

It was originally intended for Dublin;—where most of the United Irishmen were armed with Daggers only, owing to the difficulty of concealing their pikes and muskets from the general search by government,—but this is the first time I have met with it in this country.

A loyal Irishman."

At the requeſt of the Inhabitants of the Town of BOSTON, in commemoration of the anniverſary of American Independence.
By JOSIAH QUINCY.
"The inroads upon our public liberty, call for reparation—The wrongs we have ſuſtained, call for—Juſtice. That Reparation and that Juſtice, may yet be obtained, by Union, Spirit, and Firmneſs. But to divide and conquer was the maxim of the Devil in the garden of Eden, and to diſunite and enſlave hath been the principle of all his votaries from that period to the preſent."
Obſervations on the Boſton Port-Bill, &c. p. 78 by the late J. Quincy, jun.
